Tracy Chou

→ Interned & worked at Pinterest, Quora, Rocket Fuel, Google, & Facebook
→ 2011 Developed refactor allowing Pinterest engineering team to work on same codebase
→ 2013 Championed for increased diversity among tech industry

"I felt my learning style was more suited to a startup where I would be jumping around learning a lot of different things all over the place and trying to understand systems and how they all fit together, as opposed to going really deep in one area."

In addition to her engineering career, Tracy is most well-known for her work pushing for diversity in tech. In 2013, she helped to kick off the wave of tech company diversity data disclosures with a Github repository collecting numbers on women in engineering. Tracy is now a founding member of Project Include and focused on driving solutions in the space.
